

Walking through the halls of Jewish Beginnings there is a sense of being at home—the sounds of children fill the air, singing, talking, laughing and busily engaging with the world around them. Children’s artwork adorns the hallways; photos and updates of the day’s discoveries are everywhere. The entire building is filled with signs of children’s independence, learning and development as they grow into their individual identities and personalities.

It’s no wonder that Jewish Beginnings serves as an entry point to the Jewish elementary schools and all areas of Jewish life, on each family’s terms. Parents’ initial involvement in Jewish Beginnings often serves as a launch pad for continual life-long engagement with the Jewish Community.

Research has shown that the very earliest of years of a child’s life formulate the basis for their future success. The seeds of learning, curiosity and identity are implanted in infancy. The foundation for all the basics—from negotiation and cooperation to mathematics, physics and more—are all there.

Using multi sensory activities—art, music and hands-on exploration to enhance the ability of each child, help the children at Jewish Beginnings develop an enormous sense of confidence at an early age. That confidence fuels the child’s desire to probe, experiment and discover. It also sows the seeds of leadership and creativity.

Jewish Beginnings begins by providing the “basics”—a loving environment, a fresh, healthy meal and full range of stimuli both indoor and outdoor, both emotional and physical. With decades of experience, the child-rearing specialists oversee the development and progress of each child.

Judaism is not treated as simply a course or area of study. Instead it is holistically integrated into everything at Jewish Beginnings. It is organic, and the results are amazing. Parents come to appreciate the surprising depth of what their kids are enjoying and often come to enjoy it themselves.

Leaving a legacy gift with Jewish Beginnings will provide a strong Jewish foundation for children and their families. While deepening community involvement, Jewish Beginnings serves as a shining example of the best in early childhood education, and your gift will provide support for programs that offer so much to the youngest members of our community.
