+ You!

= 1 GOAL:
serving and standing up for 5,950 vulnerable people in our
East Bay community.

To our community,

By any measure, this has been a very unusual year.

All our work—with children, with seniors, with refugees, with families, with Holocaust survivors—has been amplified by increased needs and intensified anxiety. Together with our caring and generous community, we have risen to the task, serving and standing up for the most vulnerable among us while putting our core values—Compassion, Excellence, Inclusion, and Community—into action on a daily basis.

This annual report presents a snapshot of our accomplishments, with examples from some of our wide range of programs. It reflects a tremendous amount of heart, talent, and energy from hundreds of people: our extraordinary staff, our dedicated board of directors, our hard-working volunteers, and all those who generously support our work. We are all part of a 140-year-old story, continuing to serve our East Bay Jewish community while extending ourselves to serve our wonderfully diverse East Bay community as a whole. Please be inspired by our efforts, and join us as we write the next chapters in the years to come.

Best,

Avi Rose
Executive Director

Children & Parents

“We started working with JFCS East Bay three years ago to get support with our four-and-a-half-year-old triplets; one has autism and another has speech delays and emotional sensitivities. Through the years, our therapist, Marla, has formed a love and bond with our boy with autism. Hearing him say, ‘That’s my Marla,’ is an amazing show of affection, adoration, and trust. He’s learned how to express his wants and needs as well as how go to school and have friends.

He’s learned how to express his wants and needs as well as how go to school and have friends.

JFCS East Bay also supports our other child with developmental challenges. With counseling, he’s been encouraged to see his own greatness. He’s now developed confidence in himself and his talents.

Marla has helped our family learn how to support each of our children’s strengths. As a mom, there are many times when we wonder if we are making the right choices . . . if we are taking the right steps and supporting our children in the best way possible. To have JFCS East Bay support us makes us feel truly blessed.”

Refugees & Immigrants

“We had no choice but to leave Afghanistan. I had worked for USAID and my wife worked on issues of gender equality, and so our family became a target for extremist groups. Because of my work with the U.S., we were able to get the Special Immigrant Visa to come here as refugees. We arrived with our daughter, Marwa, and the triplets Mehdi, Mehek, and Mehreen. When we left Afghanistan, we had to leave behind so much of our family. For the first time, we were taking care of our children all on our own.

With all of this support, we feel safe and welcome.

At JFCS East Bay, our Afghan Case Manager helped us get through the first steps of being a newcomer in America, like applying for benefits and doing the health screening. JFCS East Bay also reached out to the community to help supply us with lots of diapers, and connect us with other parents of triplets. They set up a group of volunteers for us, who come help out with the kids at regular times in the week. Our case manager helps us with any questions we have about medical issues, housing, and getting work. With all of this support, we feel safe and welcome. We’re getting to know this place and I’m now able to go out and look for a job.”

Tamim

183 refugees resettled from Afghanistan, Syria, Iraq, Iran, Uganda, and elsewhere.

650 immigrants provided with legal services.

331 refugees and immigrants assisted with social and economic integration.

Seniors & Holocaust Survivors

“My mom, Gloria, was a Holocaust survivor from Austria who had been living in New York. Because of her increasing health challenges, I decided to move her here to Oakland to live with me. I really wanted to take good care of my mom, but as a single parent, knew that I couldn’t do it alone. Connecting with JFCS East Bay made a world of difference. Our geriatric social worker was always available for advice, plus my mom received financial assistance and help with home care services, which allowed her to stay living at home until she passed in December.

JFCS East Bay helped me feel that I was not alone in caring for a frail senior who had lots of needs.

Mom also participated in JFCS East Bay’s Holocaust survivors memoir-writing group and the Café Europa social gatherings. And JFCS East Bay connected us with the most caring friendly visitor volunteer you could ever ask for. JFCS East Bay provided the most compassionate and supportive staff and volunteers, who helped me feel that I was not alone in caring for a frail senior who had lots of needs. It takes a village to care for our elders and JFCS East Bay was that village for us.”

Volunteers

“In the past year, I became increasingly motivated to help welcome refugees to our community. I joined one of JFCS East Bay’s volunteer Welcome

It’s all stuff that helps them figure out how to live in this brand-new place.

Groups to work directly with an Afghan refugee family. Getting to know and support this family is an amazing experience. Some of what we do seems pretty basic—driving them to appointments, taking them shopping, showing them around the neighborhood—but it’s all stuff that helps them figure out how to live in this brand-new place. We’ve also been able to do some really important things—like help the dad of the family, Abdul, get a job at a law firm in San Francisco.

When the mom, Mariam, got pregnant with the family’s third child, our volunteer group visited her frequently and helped get her to all her prenatal appointments. I happened to be with Mariam when she went into labor, and ended up staying with her and Abdul throughout the delivery process, right up until when their new baby girl was born. In ways like this, we are helping refugees feel welcome. Being involved means so much to me. I know I get way, way more out of this than what I give.”

Community Support

“JFCS East Bay is one of the most important organizations in our community and it needs our support to continue its critical work. The agency’s focus on helping those in need reflects the core values of our Jewish community and provides support for young and old. We are happy to give through the agency’s annual campaign and legacy giving to sustain JFCS East Bay now and into the future.”
